10th anniversary spy thrill series

Look carefully at this man. His face is void of any happiness. He is really sad and dejected. His is spiritless. His lips and jaws are locked very hard out of anger as if he had a severe jaw-locking disease.

Now, if I tell you, “Actually he is Neil Armstrong, the First Moon-landing Hero”, you probably would react in shock, “Gee! . . . How come?” You wouldn’t believe me, that he is indeed Armstrong, because your expectations are lofty high for any moon-landing hero. As moon-landing hero, you would expect him to be cheery and triumphant? Then, there’s something wrong with Armstrong. Don’t go, we shall solve the puzzle later.

Neil Armstrong, “The First Moon-landing Hero”.

You're very familiar with this man. He's Colonel Bezabh Petros, as he is photographed by his captors Eritrean Peoples Liberation Front, in their base area in Sahel, Eritrea.

Now, let's examine carefully his portrait. Does he look POW? No. Does he look dirty or shabby? No. Does he look stressed? No.

Bezabh appears perfect with his tidy shirt and T-shirt.

The T-Shirt is unusually white as Chinese porcelain. Bez is fresh with no signs of sweating. He's cleanly shaven and he radiates shiny face.

"The first and the last to be captured in Eritrea was on April 12, 1984".
Colonel Bezabh Petros

Though the photograph was taken in Sahel, Bez appears he was in Nyala Hotel, Asmara not in the dusty and dirty Sahel of EPLF. From an espionage perspective, the overly perfection of Bez is mismatch to the rebel's Sahel. Like Armstrong's, there's something wrong with Bez. Don't go, we shall solve the puzzle later.

THE SECRET MISSION OF APOLLO 11

Astronauts Neil Armstrong, Buzz Aldrin and Michael Collins had a secret Apollo 11 mission. Their mission was not to travel deep into space to reach the moon and land on it.

Their mission was to launch their space vehicle to earth's outer limit in the space, orbit around the earth and return back to the surface.

Neil Armstrong (L), Michael Collins (C) and Buzz Aldrin (R) of the fake Apollo 11.

Upon completion of Apollo's mission, the Command Module would splash onto Pacific Ocean, where US Navy vessels would pick it up. Then, the mission is over.

Apollo 11 would be launched to earth's outer limits in the space, which is only about 500 KM of distance. It's about the same distance where Russia's Sputnik satellite orbited the earth in 1957. Apollo never went deep into space to reach the moon. The distance from earth to the moon is 384,000 KM.

On April 12, 1984, Colonel Bezabh Petros was in operational sortie, bombing EPLF strongholds along Nakfa Frontline. In the operation, his low flying MIG-23 was hit by EPLF anti aircraft calibre. The MIG-23 started to burn up in the sky, as it was oriented toward the area controlled by the Ethiopian army around Nakfa Frontline. Shortly after, it crashed to the ground in the area controlled by the Ethiopian army.

Bezabh parachuted from the burning MIG in the area controlled by EPLF. Immediately, EPLF fighters rushed to the site where he parachuted to the ground and they captured him along with his survival kit, communication radio and his chute.

The triumphant EPLF quickly vanished from the area with their highly prized POW and all his accessories and the chute. They left no trace of him. Moments later Ethiopian rescue choppers could be seen hovering over the horizon, busy searching for Bezabh. It was futile search; his captors had already secured him and gone from the scene.

WHY HUMANS CAN'T GO DEEP INTO SPACE

In the space exploration, both the Americans and the Russians knew very well, it was not possible to send humans deep into space. Humans would be exposed to lethal doses of radiations from the solar flares if they travelled deep into space without adequate and reliable protection.

If humans were to travel deep into space and return alive to earth, they would need radiation protective box of lead, which is as thick as a tire of a truck. Only thick enough of lead can adequately shield humans from the deadly solar radiations.

No rocket engine can ever lift up into space, a protective box of lead that weighs several tons. Travelling deep into space beyond 1,000 KM from earth would render humans to lethal levels of radiation. No American or Russian ever dared to it.

Colonel Bezabh Petros shot down an advanced Russian made MIG-21 in 1977, in a dogfight over the Ogaden, Eastern Ethiopia. The doomed MIG-21 belonged to the government of Major General Mohammed Siad Barre of Somalia. In the dogfight, Colonel Bezabh manned Northrop F-5E Tiger II, a US built fighter-interceptor.

Colonel Bezabh received medal of valour from Ethiopia's leader, Lieutenant Colonel Menghistu Hailemariam for his distinguished role in the air-to-air combat over the Ogaden.

This was the time before the Ethiopian Air Force fully phased out the US supplied jet fighters, which were delivered to the government of Emperor Haile Selassie, before the Emperor was deposed by the military junta known as "Derg".

THAT'S ONE SMALL STEP FOR MAN . . .

On July 24, 1969, while Apollo11 was orbiting around the earth at a distance of only 500 KM, Mission Control Centre in Houston, Texas played on a video over a giant TV screen, displaying "Armstrong landing for the first time on the moon." The video was a prefabricated video that was secretly shot on earth.

Northrop F-5E Tiger II, US built fighter-interceptor. Colonel Bezabh Petros manned F-5E, as shown here in the dogfight over the Ogaden where he scored a successful kill against Russian made MIG-21 of Somali Air Force, in 1977.

MIG-21, Russian made fighter-bomber of Somali Air Force, the type that was shot down by Colonel Bezabh's US made F-5E.

Houston displayed to the world, a rudimentary and grainy black and white video and the notorious audio record of Armstrong, "THAT'S ONE SMALL STEP FOR MAN, GIANT LEAP FOR MAN KIND". The fake video and audio of Apollo 11 was fed as newscast to the global news network.

SILENCER ONE

Once Mission Apollo 11 was over, Neil Armstrong became “self exiled” within the confines of his home in Cincinnati, Ohio.

From the day, “He returned from the moon on July 1969 till his death on August 26, 2012, the pitiful Armstrong lived unhappy, lonely and boring life in Cincinnati. It was 43 years of unhappiness,

NO valid fame NO genuine heroism NO TV shows NO interviews
NO speeches on universities NO moon-landing talk NO book publishing
. . . . NO carrying on of his profession as pilot or astronaut NO world travels
. . . . NO travel to Africa NO travel to Kagnew Station in Asmara, Eritrea.

Armstrong, For 43 years he was virtually dead on this damn earth.

NASA heavily restricted Army's life and movements with endless NO, NO, NO, NO. That is how the old man died on earth decades ago. He didn't die in 2012. After Army "returned from the moon", Cincinnati became his Earth. That's it!

That's how NASA silenced Army in order to safeguard the big secret. Yes, he is the biggest liar in the world. May God give him credits for the brutal Man's Law he suffered, while he was on earth.
